Have a Merry Hazmat Holiday!

It's my turn to host my family Christmas party! There's so much to do to get the house set up and looking festive. I already picked up some gas for the snow blower in case we end up having a "White Christmas"! Also on the shopping list are pipe cleaners, kid-safe paint, and glue for the kids to make their own Christmas crafts.

I have an appointment to get my nails done before the party. Since it's a special occasion, I'm going to get red nail polish which will match my ugly Christmas sweater. I'm also trying a new up-do hair style but it requires a lot of bobby pins and hairspray! In an attempt to make the house smell festive, I'm going to try out my new oil diffuser. I bought some new essential oils such as wintergreen and pine...can't wait to try them out.

My guests have just started arriving! I need to make sure to give grandma the end seat since she brought her oxygen tank with her. My uncle Bob is in the kitchen making his famous rum-spiked eggnog...better be careful with that! As a gift, my family gave me a GoPro Drone! I can't wait to make some movies and take pictures with it. After doing some Christmas crafts with the kids, my hands are all sticky; good thing I have some hand sanitizer handy! Since I had some supplies left over from the 4th of July party, I brought out sparklers for everyone to enjoy outside. Overall this has been a great holiday party, and I'm so glad that my family had a good time!
